

BIOGRAPHY: NAOMI MOURRA

Naomi Mourra was appointed Head of HR for BBC Worldwide Australia & New Zealand in July 2013, also joining the senior management team leading the company strategy.

Prior to this, Naomi was the Talent, Learning and Organisational Development Manger for BBC Worldwide ANZ. During this time, she worked to strengthen the HR function in territory, delivering global training and development programmes, introducing a number of well-being initiatives and offering a valuable source of support and guidance to staff members. Before moving to Australia, she worked for BBC Worldwide in the UK where she led a project to configure and implement a new global Performance, Talent and Learning Management System and re-launched the global induction program for new starters.

Naomi joined BBC Worldwide from the Citi Group in October 2009, where she was a Training Consultant.

From 2004 to 2008 she worked for EMI Music, firstly as a Training Analyst and then as a Training and Communications Consultant. She developed and implemented the training strategy for all EMI global systems and devised a communications program to engage all the key stakeholders.

Naomi has also worked for Unilever, RTA, Aspect Communications and Combined Insurance in a variety of roles.

August 2013